Silver jubilee for family roofers

■ The team at Salmons Brothers of Church Lane, Ely.

A FAMILY business to the very last, Salmons Brothers of Ely is this year celebrating its 25th birthday.

Times have certainly changed at the firm of building and roofing contractors from when brothers Bill and Sydney Salmons ran their small business from home.

The company is now housed in purpose-built premises at 6a Church Lane and is well-established in the area.

The two brothers started in the roofing trade in 1965 and gradually built up, with a pool of regular customers coming back time and time again.

Started

Explained managing director Bill Salmons: "We started off from our own houses — we had a few rolls of felt in my shed — and it went from there."

After about 10 years, the company moved to a rented premises at Waterside in Ely. The company again grew too big for those premises and after about seven years they moved to Church Lane, building their own office accommodation and yard,

Brothers started back in 1965 which has been extended throughout the years.

Sydney Salmons retired from the business 18 months ago and his shoes were filled by assistant managing director Michael Salmons, Bill's son, who has taken an active role in the company for the past five or more years.

Michael's sister, Tina Crane, is in charge of the office and will often be the person prospective customers will speak to when they call in or telephone.

Bill's wife Joyce and Michael's wife Julie play active parts as directors of the company.

Said Bill Salmons: "There are benefits of being a family business. In larger companies, every workman is just a number. Here we know everybody by their first names."

"I know many of our customers personally and see them socially as well as on a business level."

SALMONS Brothers of Ely has built up a strong reputation in the roofing industry, but the company is less widely known for its skills in the building trade.

Advice

However, the company is no novice in this field handles projects ranging from just a few pounds to major works running into hundreds of thousands of pounds, covering the private and commercial sector.

With the steady increase in the turnover of work, it was found necessary to add more office space to the existing buildings and this year saw the completion of new offices at Church Lane.

Opportunity

This also gave them the opportunity to increase our work staff to include Andy Knott as works manager.

Said managing director Bill Salmons: "With the pressures of today's business, I am only too pleased to take a less active role in running the company and I am very fortunate to have family and staff backing in the steady growth of the company."
